

VOICES OF PAPAHĀNAUMOKUĀKEA

TUNE IN!

Saturday, 7/10	Sunday, 7/11	Monday, 7/12
6 pm	3 pm	7 pm

Music by Kainani Kahaunaele

Talk Story with Kekuewa Kikilo and Brad Ka'aleleo Wong

Watch this full one-hour production, hosted by Nai'a Lewis, which includes a new documentary film Voices of Papahānaumokuākea sharing the perspectives of eight Native Hawaiians involved in establishing protections for the Northwestern Hawaiian Islands. The 39-minute documentary film offers insights into indigenous values and philosophies deeply embedded in native worldview and the relationships between people and place. Papahānaumokuākea is a cultural seascape and an origin space of Hawaiian cosmology, a unique expression of human heritage.

Through the tradition of story-telling, these Voices of Papahānaumokuākea share and promote cultural integration in the management of marine protected areas. These oral histories are a resource for other indigenous peoples and managers around the world who are working towards integrated management frameworks and will provide insights into the challenges and achievements endured over time. These Native Hawaiian community leaders convey the cultural significance of the region which upholds Hawaiian values and aspirations that continue to be the foundation for effective advocacy and protection of the Northwestern Hawaiian Islands.

Papahānaumokuākea is co-managed by

www.papahanaumokuakea.gov

Top Image: Island of Mokumanamana by Ruben Carrillo. Images from left to right (photos by OHA): Isaac "Paka" Harp, 'Aulani Wilhelm, Kekuewa Kikilo, Moani Pai, William Ailā, Nai'a Lewis, Keoni Kuoha, and Pelika Andrade.

